

The Tenure-Track Job Market at Research Universities

In this professionalization workshop, Myun Jung and Do Young will share their first-hand experiences navigating the tenure-track job market at research universities. Both speakers recently secured tenure-track positions, so they bring fresh and relevant perspectives on the process.

This workshop will offer a valuable opportunity to hear reflections on the academic job market. Their experiences should be especially helpful for graduate students and early-career scholars who want to better understand the research university job market and think more carefully about how to prepare for it.
